Three Persons Badly Injured In Crashes

-a word in edgewise; wise and otherwise

By L. M. WISE

TO MY MOTHER

Mother!

What hallowed memories the name brings surging to mind.

Retrospection is bitter sweet; mingled with joy for the hours spent under her guidance and loving care; and sorrow that the halo of the saints now crowns her head.

The years are many since she heard the words of the Master summoning her from a life of pain to one of glory.

The mossy marble rests o'er the mound that houses all that was once mortal; the spirit has taken flight from the tenement of clay; yet in memory, coming to me like a benediction I can hear her sweet voice singing her favorite hymns—the hymns that brought surcease from pain and builded unswerving faith in a life beyond where sickness and pain would be no more forever. Even when the heavy ravages of disease were exacting their crucifying toll they did not still the harmonies of those immortal songs: "Some Day the Silver Chord Will Break," and "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere."

Those dear lips are now mute, the silver chord is broken, but deep within me I know as surely as I am living, that on that beautiful isle of somewhere she is part of that angel chorus which chants:

"Holy, holy, holy Lord God almighty."

We pause today to pay reverent homage to the one who brought us into the world. Fortunate indeed are those who have mother still with them. The gifts we bring and lay at her altar are only symbols of the love and esteem in which we hold her; the outward manifestation of a worship that is closely akin to that we hold for God. But the love we bear her is not a matter of a day, but is part of our lives; is ever with us as a restraining and elevating influence; a hand pointing the way to higher and better things, those things which raise us in the esteem of man and are entered on the credit side of the great judgment book, the record of which will either glorify or condemn our life here on earth, give us entrance or bar us from the life eternal.

Author of our being, friend, counsellor, guide and inspiration; thou who showed us the way of life and whose ever watchful love should keep us in the path that we should tread, we make acknowledgment to you for the gift of life and its blessings. Enshrined in our hearts for time and eternity, we we pay tribute to you today in words that but feebly express the ever-indwelling spirit of honor and praise.

Mobilization Of Boy Scouts Is Held Here

Richmond Boy Scouts yesterday demonstrated their effective strength in case of a disaster when 154 Scouts turned out to a test mobilization held shortly before two o'clock.

Within 31½ minutes after the signal was given, these Scouts were on the scene at a large lot at First Street and Macdonald avenue and set up first aid, cooking, policing, housing and other facilities.

Richmond police, led by Chief L. E. Jones, and Richmond firemen, directed by Chief W. P. Cooper, cooperated.

Chief Jones assisted the Scouts in charge of traffic while local firemen combated a blaze in a vacant lot.

Relief headquarters were directed by Charles Wolf with first-aid departments under the direction of George Lawrence, Scoutmaster of Troop No. 15. "Meals' were prepared under the direction of Scoutmaster W. E. Watrous.

THREE CITY COUNCILMEN TO BE NAMED

Voters of Richmond will go to the polls tomorrow to select three out of six candidates to be their councilmanic representatives.

Polls will open at six o'clock in the morning and will close at seven in the evening, thus giving every Richmond citizen an opportunity to vote.

The six candidates' names will appear on the ballots in the following order:

WALTER J. JOHNSON
(incumbent)
DR. A. B. HINKLEY
(incumbent)
JOHN A. BELL
LUD M. JOHNSON
MRS. CLAIRE CURRY SCHMIDT

The primary election was one of the quietest ever held in the city but the closing days of the campaign in the general election were marked with bustling activity on the part of the candidates, some of whom made personal house-to-house canvasses of the city. Volunteer workers took the field during the closing days, contacting friends and strangers.

As a result of these activities it is expected that a record vote will be cast tomorrow.

The vote will be swelled even more by the activities of the Boy Scouts of Richmond. As a result of action taken by the Lions' Club at a recent luncheon meeting it was decided that the Scouts will cover the entire city on Monday. They will visit every home and present cards to householders urging voters to visit the polls. The Scouts will not distribute any campaign "literature" or candidates' cards. Their work will be just another "good deed" in keeping with the Boy Scout oath.

A complete list of the polling places will be found on page four of this issue.

Textile Leader Is Cleared Of NRA Violation

WASHINGTON, May 11.—UP—The Textile Relations Board today held the Calloway Mills, Lagrange, Ga., have not violated Section 7A of the NRA or the cotton textile code.

The decision came after lengthy hearings in the case both here and at Lagrange. Widespread attention had been focused on the decision by the United Textile Workers' Union, which brought the original charges.

The Calloway Mills have been the scene of considerable disorder as an outgrowth of a strike which began last February.

Defense Opens For Dad Accused Of Killing Child

LOS ANGELES, May 11.—UP—Howard L. Colby, charged with the murder of his two-year-old son through administration of an internal bath, was preparing his defense today.

The State closed its case against the 26 year old man after his wife, Mrs. Greta Colby, testified that she had found their son on the bathroom floor, its stomach swollen as a result of the asserted bath which she said her husband administered to punish the child.

Defense attorneys said they intended to show that Colby gave the boy the internal bath because the child had swallowed a "semi-poisonous" substance.

Rodeo Man Faces Drunk Drive Charge

Manuel Moreno, 25, Rodeo garage mechanic, was booked at the county jail Friday evening following his arrest by Traffic Officers Lester M. Eaton and Victor Kehlor, near Rodeo. He is charged with driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor.

Be Not Deceived

The "single shot" advocate, as is usual on the eve of every election, was in evidence yesterday, and no doubt will pursue his shady tactics today and tomorrow, hoping to catch the unwary.

The "single shotter" always has a plausible tale to tell, to account for the request he makes of the voter to forfeit the larger part of his franchise rights.

Usually he bases his appeal to his friends on the ground of good citienship, and the necessity of guaranteeing the election of some one particular candidate.

He never lacks for alleged reasons and puts up such a story that the voter is often deceived into accepting the sophistry.

There are three candidates to be elected tomorrow, to be selected by the electors from six in the field.

The cause of clean, decent government cannot be helped, but it can be materially and lastingly harmed if the voters are misled into "single shotting", thus throwing away two-thirds of their electoral rights.

Additionally a grave injustice will be done to good citizens on the ticket who are entitled to your suffrage. Those you consider will acceptably fill the positions of councilmen or councilwoman are entitled to that expression of your confidence.

The old game of trying to "single shot" a candidate into office always has and always will have an ulterior motive in the background that will not bear close scrutiny.

The voters are also entitled to a further warning against combination tickets. As far as we can learn the big majority of candidates is running on an independent and personal basis with party lines strictly eliminated.

If combinations or "slates" are offered at the eleventh hour and fifty-ninth minute, it is a certainty that the intent is malevolent.

Designedly this is for the purpose of injuring the candidate, the linking of whose name with another candidate is only for the purpose of the weak and discredited candidate drawing strength from the popular and respected one.

Under such circumstances these "slates" are nothing more or less than the spawn of the devil.

Beware, and do not be deceived by them.

Four Children Are Drowned In Kansas Stream

HUTCHINSON, Kan., May 11—UP—Four little girls today stepped into a sand pit while wading in the almost dry bed of the Arkansas River and were drowned.

The victims: Lorraine Metz, 6; Thelma Metz, 8, and Esther Metz, 3, all daughters of Mr. and Mrs. George Metz, and Ida May Blower, 7, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Blower.

Police and firemen, using grappling hooks, recovered the bodies from the 15 foot pit a half hour after they tumbled in.

W. S. Straight, a fisherman, saw the accident. He said he noticed the girls laughing and splashing the water as they waded in the shallow stream. In the next instant, they disappeared. He ran to the place he last saw them, learned what had happened and spread the alarm.

Mrs. Congdon Rites To Be Held Monday

Funeral services will be held Monday morning from the Wilson & Kratzer chapel for the late Mrs. Mary Cora Congdon, who was allegedly slain by her husband, Willis Congdon, Friday afternoon at Pinole.

Following the services, cremation will take place at the Berkeley crematory.

Congdon, who attempted to kill himself after shooting his wife, is still at a local hospital in a serious condition as the result of a bullet wound in his head. The man is under heavy guard as officers fear he will attempt to kill himself.

Although shot in the head, it is believed by attending physicians that the bullet did not pierce Congdon's brain. Blood transfusions to which he has been subjected have given him a fighting chance to recover.

Meanwhile authorities are planning to press charges against Congdon who is said to have freely admitted to police that she slew his wife. Financial difficulties were blamed for the tragedy.

Letter Craze Snaps Mind Of Bell Boy

OAKLAND, May 11.—UP—Norman Arnberg, 23, was a good bell hop. His employers praised him as being industrious and ambitious.

They nodded knowingly to themselves: "Watch that young fellow; he won't be hopping bells all his life."

Everything was serene in young Arnberg's life until last week he received a dime chain letter.

It intrigued him. He sat about the lobby of the hotel, figuring how much profit could be made by subscribing to the chain letter craze. It became an obsession with him.

Today they took Arnberg to the psycopathic ward of a local hospital — a fugitive from a chain letter.

WOMEN SAID HOLDING OUT FOR MURDER

SAN JOSE, May 11.—UP—Their faces flushed as though they had come from a heated argument, jurors in the David Lamson wife-murder trial, retired to bed, apparently hopelessly deadlocked on a verdict, at 9:45 o'clock tonight.

They had spent better than 13 solid hours in their deliberations with indications at least five of the men members still were holding out against a murder conviction.

Sheriff George Lyle said the jury would return to its deliberations at 10 A. M. tomorrow.

As the jurymen filed out they were cross and unsmiling. The women particularly wore flushed looks and they walked along without exchanging a word.

During the long hours they were locked up in the conference rooms Defense Attorney Edwin McKenzie nervously paced the corridor nearby.

LAMSON TENSE

Lamson waited tensely and nervously in his cell, surrounded by his sisters and a small group of friends.

It was the second time in two years that the once debonair young Stanford press executive jousted with death or freedom because his young wife, Allene, was found battered to death in a cottage a stone's throw from the Stanford campus home of Herbert Hoover.

"The situation is still as hot as ever. The men have confidence in their leaders.

"So far, we have done everything in our power to be moderate. We don't want a strike, but if it's the last alternative, we'll go ahead with the vote."

Speaking Of Sports

LONDON, May 11.—UP— The Chilean and South American lawn tennis champion, Senorita Anita Lizana, is attracting more attention from British experts than any woman since Suzanne Lenglen was in her prime.

"A Wimbledon champion of a couple of years hence," is how some experts hail this 20-year-old, short, stocky, attractive brunette. She has captured the hearts of the fans with her beautiful footwork, which had earned her the nickname of "Little Pavlova of the tennis courts."

Until Anita came to Britain she never had played on a grass court, but after only a week's practice she swept the field at the Tally Ho Club, Birmingham, beating several tournament players, including Britain's third ranked woman, left-handed Kathleen Stammers, while on her way to the final.

She impressed the experts with her audacious game and her dancer-like footwork. She skipped to the ball and when time permitted advanced towards it in a sinister manner that boded evil for her opponent. She was as nonchalant as Henri Cochet, but as mirthful as the former great favorite with British fans, Spanish Senorita Lili D'Alvarez.

Her daring drop shots in the middle of a baseline rally were so unexpected that her opponents could not get near them. She had a rather obvious weakness, however, in her backhand from which most of her opponents' points were gained.

She was the subject of page one stories in the newspapers for several days. Her fame on the courts brought her fame also as a leader of women's fashions and the fashion and gossip writers noted the style of Anita's dress, both on and off the tennis courts. Her dark walking suit, trimmed in an original way with scalloped edging, was particularly prominent in the fashion pages.

One tennis fashion, however, she borrowed from the British women. While playing at Birmingham she wore pleated shorts for the first time in her life, instead of her one-piece dress. The change of costume certainly suited her active type of game.

OMAHA RACES TO VICTORY IN PREAKNESS

BALTIMORE, Md., May 11.—UP—Omaha raced to a smashing victory in the Preakness today, duplicating the feat of his famous sire in winning both the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness in succession.

The hard-running son of Gallant Fox scored easily, beating Firethorn to the wire by six lengths in near track record time.

Psychic Bid was third, another six lengths back.

The race was run in 1:58 2-5, two-fifths of a second off the track record held by Gallant Knight.

Omaha was an odds-on choice of the record crowd of 45,000, which taking advantage of a bright, sunny day, thronged this historic old hill-top course.

The across-the-board prices paid on Omaha in the totalizer were $3.90, $3.10, $2.60.

Firethorn, coupled with Commonwealth in the betting, paid $3.40 and $2.80.

Housewives Of Alaska Colony Keeping House

PALMER, Alaska, May 11.—UP—Sturdy housewives of the Matanuska valley's "New Day" colonists set up housekeeping today.

The "honeymoon" of the colony of 67 midwestern farm families engaged in a giant social rehabilitation experiment after drouth and depression, was officially over as clotheslines were strung up and pungent wood smoke drifted from tin chimneys.

Work was the order of the day, the first day not actually spent in travel since the colonists set out from their midwest homes six weeks ago.

Snow-white tents—72 of them—resembled nothing other than the camp of an army. Row on row, they spread out in neat streets, and one of the first tasks of the elders of the village will be to find significant names for the thoroughfares. And this is a job the entire colony approaches seriously.

500 Cheering Persons Hurt During Jubilee

LONDON, May 11.—UP— More than 500 screaming, cheering British subjects were injured tonight when the greatest mob in 40 years gathered at Buckingham Palace to pay devotion to King George and Queen Mary.

Twelve victims, including a woman whose ribs were crushed in the crowd, were taken to hospitals for treatment.

Hundreds of others were treated at first aid stations dotting the Palace area.

King George, celebrating the jubilee anniversary of his 25 years as monarch of the British Empire and the Queen appeared on the Palace balcony.

They stood there for seven minutes while a crowd estimated at 250,000 cheered.

ITALY POLICY IN ETHIOPIA IS ALARMING

GENEVA, May 11.—UP—Officials of the League of Nations received alarming reports today about potential war between Italy imminent and there seemed no sure way of stopping them by international [illegible].

Italy's mobilization of more than 1,000,000 men under the colors, and the warlike statements in the inspired Italian press left little doubt here that Premier Benito Mussolini was ready for action.

French and British sources displayed [illegible].

The fear was [illegible] raised that if Italy's armed strength is diverted to Africa, Germany might seize the opportunity to encroach on Austria, jeopardizing the entire delicate balance of present European relations.

Increasing friction between Italy and Abyssinia, accompanied by military preparations on both sides, added to the apprehension here. Italy has been pouring troops and war supplies into east Africa, and at the same time berating European nations, through the Italian press, for furnishing arms, munitions and airplanes to Abyssinia. Emperor Haille Selassie of Abyssinia has been quoted in the European press as declaring that he will order general mobilization if war is threatened and that he will never submit to Italian domination.

POLICE PRACTICE WITH MACHINE GUNS

Members of the El Cerrito police force will receive instructions this week upon the use of the new machine gun recently presented to the police department by the Louis Hagen Post of the American Legion.

In case we are ever forced into that long-talked of war with Japan, the Japs had better beware of El Cerrito. The way Thulin and Burpee have been shooting, and now with the ladies pistol team taking prizes, and the new machine gun in the hands of the police department, we are just about an army all by ourselves, or could be if necessary.

It is remindful of the speech made just before the World war by William Jennings Bryan, then secretary of war. "If we should be forced to enter the war," said he, "a hundred thousand volunteers would be in arms over night," whereupon a facetious senator shouted, "Whose arms?"

Lesson Sermon at Science Church

In all Christian Science churches, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass., a Lesson-Sermon will be read Sunday, May 12, on the subject "Adam and Fallen Man."

The Golden Text will be: "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up: that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life" (John 3: 14, 15). Bible selections will include the following passage from Romans 6: 20-22. "For when ye were the servants of sin, ye were free from righteousness. What fruit had ye then in those things whereof ye are now ashamed? for the end of those things is death. But now being made free from sin, and become servants to God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life."

A passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, will also be included, which reads as follows: "When we wake to the truth of being, all disease, pain, weakness, weariness, sorrow, sin, death, will be unknown, and the mortal dream will forever cease" (pp. 218, 219).

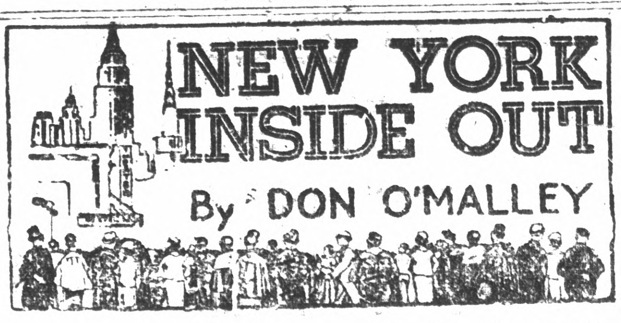
THE BEAUTIFUL WAY

Neither winter storms nor summer heat can effect the tranquility and serenity of Mausoleum burial.

Sunset Mausoleum



NEW YORK, May 11.—"Beefsteak Charlie" Chessar, at 68, is staging a come-back, and old timers who properly valued sizzling steaks and spicy green apple pie should be happy again.

For years Beefsteak Charlie's place on West Fiftieth street kept epicureans in a mellow frame of mind. Sportsmen, theatrical folk and the bigwigs of Broadway used to gather there nightly for eating comfort and cheer. Then the depression came along, and on one and the same day Charlie lost his wife, his restaurant, and a lifelong friend, his landlord. Charlie didn't have the heart to go on [illegible] the money.

Then along came Jesse Wallick, another old friend also in the same business. Jesse had been licked by the depression, too, losing his Hotel Roy. But soon after he managed to swing a small loan, and a few weeks ago opened a bar at Third Avenue and Forty-first Street.

Chessar strolled into the bar one day looking for a job. Jesse put his arm around his old friend and offered him half the premises. Now the two old cronies are hard at it rebuilding their reputations. Charlie likes Third Avenue because its people use the street to get to where they're going.

"They don't glorify it the way they do Broadway, and weep over it's vanished glories," he says. "Broadway has a past. Third Avenue has a future."

SKIN GAME—Depression tactics have hit the book publishing business, and down at the sales department of William Morrow the auditor's staff is all hot and bothered about a new item for entry in the ledgers.

Morrow's recently published a book of wild animal stories and advertised it in the papers. The other day a citizen of Garden City, Texas, sent in a silky but slightly odoriferous goat skin, accompanied by full explanations of the process of tanning, and offered to swap it for a copy of the book.

"I have a good big white tanned goat hide," wrote the Texas gentleman, "which I will send you for the book to lay for your bed. It is big anoo for you & your wife both to stand on it if you have a wife or you can split it in 2 and make 2 of it as it is big anoo for 2 if you don't want to trade or swapp."

The New York boys can't make up their minds whether this is a new con game, or whether they're just being played for sheep.

While the Lower House was in session as a means of clearing a crowded calendar, the Senate was in adjournment over the week end.

Included in the measures approved by the Assembly was a bill granting additional tidelands to the City of San Francisco to be used for further development of a yacht harbor.

Granting free fishing licenses to all persons over 70 years of age.

Tightening restrictions of the State Barber Act to require out of state barbers to take the state examination before they are permitted to practice in California.

BRITISH TEAR DOWN RED FLAG AT KING'S FETE

LONDON, May 11.—UP—A Communist banner was unfurled with a flourish—and as quickly torn to shreds by cheering subjects—when King George and Queen Mary formally received the mayors and mayoresses of the eight northern boroughs today in connection with the king's jubilee celebration.

The king and queen appeared to be amused by the incident.

The banner, inscribed "Twenty-five Years of War and Unemployment," was disclosed on top of a huge block of apartments adjacent to the Marylebone Town Hall, where the reception was held. It was soon torn to pieces.

Their majesties drove to North London in an open landau drawn by four bay horses with blue and white clad postillions and scarlet-coated outriders. They waved gaily to 70,000 children at a picnic on the green and in St. James Park, and the children shrilled a wild reply.

HOLLYWOOD, May 11.—The unusual is so much a matter of routine in the motion picture business that nobody batted an eye in the Warner Brothers technical department at a memo: "Reproduce a 90-foot section of the Golden Gate Bridge, including one tower."

This bridge, a piece of which was so blandly asked, is under construction in San Francisco Bay and has the world's longest suspension span. Each of the two towers is 160 feet higher than the Washington Monument and required 150 carloads of steel.

Kay Francis and George Brent were to appear in several scenes on the bridge, so the technical department got busy. Obviously the set could not be all steel, but part of it had to be, so actual riveting could be going on.

Plans were drawn exactly as though the real bridge were to be constructed; every rivet and plate had to be like the original. In four days the technicians accomplished—to the eye, at least—what the bridge builders took eight months to do.

The set shows 45 feet of the tower's height, all its width and a side section. One of the movable steel platforms on which the riveters work hangs from the tower. The lower part of the tower is of tons of fabricated steel, for the riveters to work on, and the rest of wood.

In the motion picture, there will be a fight on one of the girders at a dizzy height over the water.

Experienced bridge workers have been hired as extras at an unusually high wage.

HOUSE-PARTY MURDER

by Mildred Snow Gleason

Joan Blanes, who lives with her Aunt Harriet, wealthy but eccentric old invalid, is deeply distressed when her aunt invites three men—Rodney Mains, Stephen Carts and William Grove—to their isolated country house for the week-end and tells Joan that she must pick a husband from among them. Joan gets little comfort when she seeks help and advice from her brother Rickey. Meanwhile, on her own, she has invited another young man, Timothy Reilly, for the week-end. At dinner the first night, every one is under considerable tension when William suddenly asks how many of those present know that Aunt Harriet has a $100,000 diamond necklace concealed in her room. Rodney drops his fork with a clatter.

CHAPTER IV

THERE was dead silence for a moment, and Joan turned a startled face toward her brother. She had thought that no one knew about the necklace except Rickey and herself. Rickey, smashing out his cigarette with nervous fingers, stared ahead of him as though he had heard nothing. Joan felt her temples throbbing and wondered suddenly if Rickey had given away the secret. She wet her lips and tried to say something, but it was William who again broke the silence.

"You see," he murmured. "Nerves."

Rodney, having recovered from his momentary loss of control snorted scornfully.

"Then why the excitement when I asked a perfectly simple question?" said William.

"Listen here, Grove," Rodney demanded angrily, "are you trying to insinuate that—"

"That you have a passion for gems and would give a great deal to see the famous necklace?" William was smiling, but there was a steel note in his voice. "Of course I'm insinuating that. What's wrong about it? A perfectly harmless passion. Everyone knows you could buy the necklace twice over if you chose."

"If it were for sale," Stephen suggested mildly.

Rodney turned on the poet furiously—a fury quite out of keeping with the remark.

"You fool! What do you know about it?"

"Just—just an idle thought," Stephen stammered. "Didn't mean a thing. Sorry, old man."

JOAN broke in quietly with a suggestion that they move into the library for coffee. Above all, there must be no fighting. A strong intuition warned her of the danger if, as William put it, their defenses were broken down.

It was a relief to find Timothy at her side as they filed out of the dining room.

"Keep a stiff upper lip," he murmured, and then, more seriously, "Was it true about the necklace?"

She nodded. "Yes, but how did he know?"

Timothy shrugged. "A necklace of that value isn't easy to keep a secret," he said.

Timothy shrugged. "Hundreds of ways of knowing. A necklace of that value isn't easy to keep a secret."

"But that it was in Aunt Harriet's room?" she insisted, looking up at him, worried.

"Can't answer that one—but is it so serious?"

He was so reassuring, so calm about it, that Joan felt ashamed of her nervousness.

"Maybe not," she smiled. "Anyway, we must catch up with the others."

"Is that so important, either?" he mocked, but there was something in his eyes that made her look away. She was disappointed when he abruptly changed the subject. "Funny fellow, Grove. Haven't quite got his number yet."

"Oh, he just likes to be clever," Joan answered.

"Clever—clever," murmured Timothy. "I wonder if it was cleverness or stupidity. What would he gain by making a row?"

"Now you are talking in riddles," Joan protested.

Timothy ran his fingers through his hair and grinned.

"Maybe this house has got me, too."

But he was no longer serious, and Joan sensed, with a comfortable feeling of security, that it would take a lot more than the gloomy atmosphere of an old house and an ill-assorted company to shake Timothy's nerves.

WHEN they reached the library, coffee had already been served. Rickey was leaning against the table scowling at his shoes. The other three were seated. Rodney sat on the edge of his chair. Stephen nervously crossed and uncrossed his knees. Only William, leaning back comfortably, held his cup in steady fingers and sipped leisurely at his coffee. He was smiling, as though vastly amused by something.

"What's been keeping you two?" Rodney asked, his voice unpleasant. "Don't think you can steal a march on us."

Joan laid a restraining hand on Timothy's arm, and she felt the muscles swell under the sleeve of his coat, but she need not have worried. Timothy had learned long ago to control himself, and now he merely turned his back on Rodney and picked up a coffee cup.

"Rodney's manners are really outrageous," William murmured, "but he doesn't mean anything. You must forgive him."

"I prefer," Timothy answered, just as quietly, "not to notice, and especially not to make comments. They don't seem to help matters much."

"Quite right," William admitted silkily. "Quite, quite right."

Rodney grunted and stood up.

"I'll tell you what we can do," he said, turning toward William and Stephen. "We can flip a coin for her."

For a moment, then, Timothy saw red, and took a long stride across the room.

"You cad!" His voice trembled with anger.

"Oh, for heaven's sake, stop it!" Rickey exclaimed, waking at last from his absorption. "That's going a bit too far, Rod."

STEPHEN made a fluttery gesture with his hand, and the corners of his mouth twitched. He looked toward Joan, who stood by the door, a faint flush on her cheeks, her eyes mutely imploring.

"If you like," he said quietly, "we could go into another room and I could recite some of my poetry to you."

It was said in all seriousness, but it saved the situation. Rodney broke into a bellow of mirth.

"What about a game of bridge?" William asked, when Rodney had subsided. "There are six of us, but we can cut in."

"I'm out." Rickey threw his cigarette into an empty cup. "I've got letters to write."

He left the room, and Joan followed him into the hall.

"Rickey, was it you?"

"Was it me what?"

Joan hesitated and then went on firmly.

"Was it you who told William about the necklace?"

"Me?" He laughed shortly. "I may be a fool, but not that much of one. Mark my words, Jo. . ." His face looked suddenly pale and drawn in the flickering firelight. "There's going to be trouble in this house, and if you want my reasons for thinking so, I can give you four good ones."

ALCOHOL IN ACTION

Mrs. Carl W. Longacre

"So drunk I don't remember what happened," is the only excuse offered by an eighteen-year-old youth who was taken to the San Francisco city prison on January 7 on manslaughter charges, following the death of an elderly woman and injury of her daughter-in-law. The two women were crossing the street when the auto driven by the intoxicated youth bore down on them at rapid pace, dragging the older woman fifty feet.

TWO GLASSES OF BEER DID IT: For the third time now, James Cermak of LaGrange, Illinois, has stood trial for the death of Leroy Susan'a who was fatally injured, a year ago, when struck by the defendant's automobile. Witnesses testified that young Cermak was speeding and was intoxicated, but he and his companion in the car declared that they had "only two glasses of beer." He was again found guilty of manslaughter.

SIX YEAR OLD BOY ATTENDS SCHOOL DRUNK

A six-year-old boy staggered into his 1-A class in Brooklyn, New York, a few days ago, after the lunch hour. His teacher suspected he was drunk and her suspicions were confirmed after she had called a patrolman who summoned a physician from the M. E. Hospital of Brooklyn. The child, suffering from alcoholism, was taken to a hospital where he said that his mother had given him wine at his noon lunch.

ELECT JOHN A. BELL

I am running as an Independent Candidate for City Councilman, and if elected, promise to administer the affairs of the city to the very best of my ability and in accordance with my very best judgment.

I am for the most economical and efficient possible administration of city government. As a property owner, I favor the lowest possible tax consistent with the maintenance of the normal functions of a municipal government.

If the voters of the city indicate that they believe the Harbor Management Lease is improper and not to the best advantage of the city, I will support them in any adjustment or change in the harbor management the majority of the people indicate they desire. This is a matter, I feel, that the people themselves should decide.

I shall use my utmost endeavor to promote the prosperity of Richmond and all of her people.

Charges are Moderate

It is well to remember that a beautiful mortuary does not mean high prices, as this firm proves. With all the refinements and comforts to be found here, charges are never higher than the smallest incomes can easily afford. Colitis Needs Great Care And Patience If Complete Cure Is To Be Effected

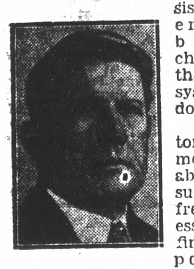
ANY treatment of colitis will of necessity be slow, continued, and must be varied with conditions. By the time the condition is recognized, it has persisted long enough to become chronic and the entire system is run down.



DR. CHRISMAN

General tonic treatment with an abundance of sunshine and fresh air are essential. If financially possible, a change of residence to the mountains or sea shore or into a hospital will be helpful, as the control of diet and nursing care are of great importance.

Constipation, which is the frequent cause, coupled with pills and cathartics, must be overcome. This can best be accomplished with small frequent alkaline enemas. Liquid petrolatum, one or two tablespoonfuls, two or three times a day is given on an empty stomach, because it increases the bulk, and lubricates and protects the raw lining of the intestine.

Six or eight teaspoonfuls of agar agar a day may aid in the later stages. Rest in bed for three or four weeks should be obtained, if possible, but most patients do not feel that they are sick enough for that. However, we have an inflamed, swollen, possibly ulcerated mucous membrane which is very irritable. Our aim must be to reduce the irritation as much as possible, and give it rest and nourishment.

THE difficulty in accomplishing this condition is what makes the cure slow and discouraging. The recovery from colitis after the digestion and blood deficiencies are corrected is a matter distinctly of diet, rest, fresh air, and tonics.

At first all foods that contain much waste or roughage should be avoided. Take only foods that are easily digested, and as far as possible absorbed.

Here is a sample diet list which can be varied as conditions change. For breakfast, part of this list can be taken: Orange juice, grapefruit without the fiber, coffee, chocolate, cocoa, or tea. One or two eggs, boiled or poached, with a slice of bacon. White bread and butter, toast, or zwieback, no whole wheat. Any smooth mush, cream of wheat, cornmeal, strained rolled oats, or farina. Puffed cereals or corn flakes. No coarse breakfast foods.

For lunch: Broths, bouillon, cream soups, chowder. Small amount of fish, oysters, chicken meat, avoid fibrous parts and gristle. White bread and butter, no bran bread or biscuits. Boiled rice, well cooked cauliflower, and custards. For dinner: Soups, fish meat, oysters, chicken. No canned fish or pork. No veal, crab, or lobster.

WHITE bread and butter, hot biscuits made small so as to consist mainly of crust. Potatoes, baked or mashed, or French fried sweet potatoes. Hominy well hulled. Stewed tomatoes, strained, with cracker crumbs. Cauliflower with cream sauce, asparagus tips. Later macaroni, or spagetti cooked soft with cheese or cream sauce. Purees of peas, beans, lentils with all skin and fiber removed. Sweet canned corn without the husk. Bananas can be fried or baked in their skins. No salads at first.

For dessert: Simple puddings, custards, ice cream, jello, plain cake, canned or stewed fruit. Avoid plain cheese, nuts, and raisins.

The curing of the trouble is a long, hard pull. Try to find what agrees with you, but do not starve or fast. The bowel must have work to do to rid itself of the inflamed membranes.

QUESTION: R. O. N. Your question cannot be answered in the column. If you will send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question, I will try to answer.

Mrs. H., Carlisle. You do not give much information on which to form an opinion. I should see a physician and have heart examined and see if you have an over-active thyroid gland.

Concerning Questions

Dr. Chrisman offers readers the privilege of addressing questions to him care of this column. He will answer questions of general interest in his regular daily column on this page.

Guide to Charm

SNAPSHOTS CAN SERVE TO SHOW BEAUTY DEFECT

By JACQUELINE HUNT

"PRETTY as a picture"—we often hear the expression used in describing a pretty girl, but the "picture" referred to is seldom the kind you find in your snapshot album; it is more apt to mean the girl in the cigarette or toothpaste advertisement.

Do you often wonder how these girls who pose for magazine covers and advertisements manage to be so pretty? Often they possess nothing unusually pretty in the way of features. The answer is that they know their good points and know how to play them up. And you can do the same.

Your old photograph album is your most useful textbook. You may be dreadfully embarrassed at your awkward posture or walk as shown in the snapshot that someone took when you were not looking, but it should be a constant reminder for you to improve your posture and to practice a more graceful and easy walk.

MISS HUNT

The next photograph may show you clearer than your full-length mirror that your suits and dresses are too short or too long to balance your figure. And they also show whether the details of your ensemble are as good as you thought they were. You can profit by your past mistakes to be more careful in the future.

Still another picture shows your face in greater detail and you are surprised to see your face seems much wider or thinner than it should be? Why? It may be that your make-up was incorrectly applied and made shadows where shadows did not belong. It may be that your hair was too kinky or fluffed out over your ears and made your face seem broader than it really was.

Or maybe your face seems too thin because your hair is straight and skinned back from your forehead and ears when you should have softness in these two areas. Wherever the fault lies, correct it. Your pictures do not really lie and strangers see you almost as mercilessly as the camera.

Heavens, this is the worst of all! This picture makes your nose look enormous. Well, is it inclined to be a little large? No use dodging the fact, especially since you can do so much to make it less conspicuous. Simply give your eyebrows a well-defined line, keep your rouge under your eyes and out toward the temples, make your lips gay and vivid and change your hairdress.

I will tell you in greater detail how to improve some of the common defects in tomorrow's column.

Glamorous Eyes

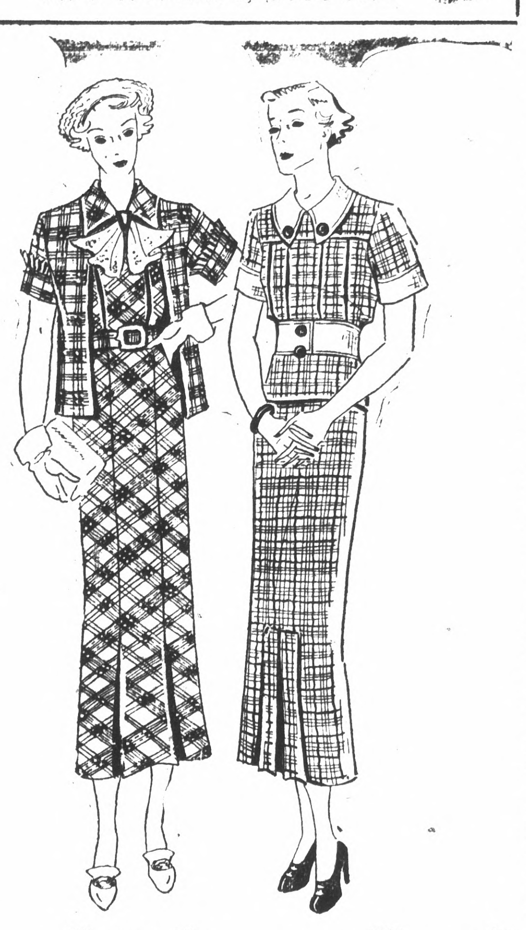
If you want additional tips on eye make-up and new aids to eye beauty send a self-addressed stamped envelope for a copy of my new leaflet Glamorous Eyes.

For Best Eggplant

When shopping for eggplant, see that it has a smooth skin. Wrinkles here generally denote age, usually a sign of bitter flavor. Buy just enough to be cooked at one time, as eggplant does not keep well after being cut.

Great Cotton Year Is Surely Forecast With Pastel Shades Leading in Favor

TWO NOVELTY COTTONS



Copyright, 1935, by Fairchild.

By IRENE VAIL

New York — In May summer clothes become the great question of the day. One is presumably outfitted for spring, and looking ahead toward those charming summery things with which the shops have been tempting us for so long.

Now it is when one should take advantage of the southern resort style gossip. What were successes below the Mason and Dixon Line are bound to be successes in any latitude.

It was a great cotton year, and a great year for dusty pink, for combinations of pink and blue, for yellow and in short, for the entire pastel range. Usually fashion reporters from winter resorts emphasize the dominance of white, but this has been the exceptional year. White, lots of it of course, but plenty of color.

In order to overcome any prejudice or discomfort about summer gloves, the shops are ready with a most attractive array of sheer gloves—even mitts. The 1935 version of the lace mitt has a flaring top, often a ruffled one. There are any number of novelty gloves, most of them washable.

Sketched today at the left, a novelty plaid cotton with dot overpattern is styled in a soft version of the daytime suit, combining one-piece dress with lingerie detail at neckline with the short-sleeved hip-length box coat.

At the right, a two-piece dress of style interest is developed in plaid seersucker with collar, cuffs and wide belt of white linen.

At right of the column are shown two novel maid's uniforms. At the top, organdie in a shadow design is featured in apron of pointed motif, complemented by harmonized design in the matching fabric collar and cuff set.

The model below is in another crisp cotton, featuring embroidered organdie, with novel edging

Beauty Tips

QUESTION: "Is honey good for the skin? If so, how can I use it? My skin is sallow and rough, although I have used several kinds of creams and tonics. Now I would like to try something that I can mix myself.
—D. B."

A honey pack might lighten your skin slightly and improve its tone. Mix one-half cup almond meal with enough honey to make a paste that will spread easily. Cleanse the skin thoroughly with two applications of cleansing cream before using the honey mask. Leave on the face for about twenty minutes and remove with tepid water. Pat your skin dry and apply a light film of cold cream or softening cream since the mask is slightly drying in effect.

QUESTION: "My neck is awfully flabby and lined. Is there an astringent or something that I can use to reduce the folds and make the flesh firm and smooth?
—Flora K."

Massage and exercise are needed to make your tissues firmer and to reduce any unnecessary deposits of fat. Cleanse the neck thoroughly, dip your fingers into a good cream and massage thoroughly. Often you can combine the massage and exercise movements. Then remove the excess cream and wrap your neck with a strip of gauze that has been soaked in cold witch hazel or a good skin astringent. Leave the gauze around your neck for half an hour.

The Name of Edison in View Once More as Charles Edison Joins Recovery Board

THE name of Edison still is one of the best known in America, but of late years it has not been heard as often as was the case when the late electrical genius was alive. Now we see it come back into daily life again, for Charles Edison, eldest son of the Menlo Park wizard, has been appointed to the National Industrial Recovery Board, and he is likely to play an important role.

He and the younger brother, Thomas, are the children of his father's third marriage, and to them was left the bulk of the estate and the dominating shares of the many Edison companies. Charles Edison is president of the Thomas A. Edison Industries having succeeded his father in 1926, when the inventor retired from active business management in order to spend all his time in the laboratory.

Charles is not a genius, and doesn't care to be one. He has led a life of normality, and except for having to shoulder the responsibility of the vast Edison estate, he is like most every young man with a flair for both work and play.

One unusual chapter in young Edison's life occurred just after he was graduated from Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1913. The Edison company owned a phonograph shop at Eighth Street and Fifth Avenue, New York, and the son tried to promote sales. He became interested in the district, and thus became one of the "before-the-war" Greenwich Villagers, when tourists used to gaze at short-haired women and long-haired men. Edison joined forces with a young eccentric, Guido Bruno and they published a magazine called Bruno's Weekly, with plenty of Edison phonograph ads in it. Later the shop itself was transferred into the "Thimble Theater." No record is available about an increase in sales, but young Edison had a good time, anyway.

As time went on he drifted into the business end of Edison Industries. He started the idea of Edison scholarships for promising boys, worked out many of the questions in the famous Edison questionnaire, is a collector of rare books, and likes fishing.

Taste, Not Duty, Prompts Moderns to Eat Vegetables

By JUDITH WILSON

"YOU need vegetables" and "they are good for you" are no longer sufficient reasons for filling our market baskets with the colorful offerings of the vegetable markets. True, the health-giving properties of vegetables have been much publicized the past few years, but "we like them" is the real reason we are going in for them so whole heartedly.

We have learned how to cook vegetables to retain all of their rich and varied flavors, their color and shape. We no longer mask them with doughy sauces and cook them to a flavorless pulp.

And we are less likely to go in for such methods of cookery as steaming, which is undoubtedly healthful, but which destroys the color and appearance of any but the sturdy root vegetables. We know that appearance and fine natural flavor more than compensates for the loss of a few minerals when the food is boiled quickly in salted water.

Doing things with vegetables right now is more fun than ever since the summery sun on remote little farms has brought more plentiful supplies and lower prices to our markets than for some time past. You can even afford to make interesting main dishes from mushrooms, and green, fat and succulent shoots of asparagus.

Globe artichokes, tender new peas, limas and string beans, French endive, escarole, chicory and colorful bunches of radishes all beg for a place in your shopping basket. In addition there are new potatoes, the huge, mild Bermuda onions, tomatoes and watercress that will give zest to your menus. Here are a few simple, yet delicious vegetable recipes:

MENUS

Luncheons

Fruit Cup
Mushroom-Rice Casserole
Escarole with Hot Dressing
Custard Filled Cupcakes
Tea with Lemon

Cream of Tomato Soup
Salad Vinaigrette
Hot Biscuits Plum Jam
Baked Fresh Pears
Coffee Cocoa

Mushroom Casserole

Into an earthenware casserole put three tablespoons melted butter and into this stir three cups of peeled and sliced mushrooms. Season them well with salt and pepper. Over the mushrooms spread a cup of cooked rice that has been well seasoned with salt curry and a dash of cayenne pepper. Sprinkle liberally with melted butter. Over the rice spread a cup of fresh tomatoes cut into small cubes and season again with salt, pepper and a sprinkle of sugar. Put a thin covering of chopped mushrooms on top and cover with thin slices of buttered bread. Bake for half an hour in a moderate oven.

Salad Vinaigrette

This salad requires asparagus, sliced tomatoes, sliced cucumbers, sliced cold boiled potatoes, boiled peas or new lima beans, fine strips of boiled ham and crisp inner leaves of lettuce. Arrange lettuce on individual plates. On this arrange the asparagus, radiating from the center with the tips out. Mix the other vegetables and toss together with French dressing. Pile in the center of the plate over the asparagus butts. Pour over all a vinaigrette dressing made by adding to one cup of dressing a small sour pickle chopped fine, a teaspoon each of minced parsley, chives, sweet green pepper and one-half teaspoon of hot green or red pepper.

Serve hot biscuits or rolls with this salad and you will find that you have a delightful main course for luncheon or supper.

Vegetable Upside Down Cake

Make a batter from four tablespoons shortening blended into two cups flour sifted with three teaspoons baking powder and one-half teaspoon salt. Beat an egg and add to one cup milk and combine with the first mixture. Grease a shallow baking pan and arrange in patterns four cups of freshly cooked carrots, peas, asparagus tips and celery. Add one-fourth cup of the stock in which the vegetables were cooked. Drop the batter over the top and bake in a hot oven until the bread is well done. Turn out on a hot platter with the vegetables on top. Dot liberally with butter and serve with mushroom gravy.

MODES AND MANNERS

QUESTION: "Please tell me what is the correct way to mark a bride's silver. No two persons seem to agree. One says use the initials of the bride's maiden name, and the other says, use the initials of her future name.
—Mrs. A. P. L."

ANSWER: Either way is correct. It might be a good idea to consult the bride. Then you will be sure to have the silver monogrammed in the style which she prefers.

QUESTION: "What initials should a divorcee who remarries use on her trousseau linen?
—I. P. C."

ANSWER: The initials that will be hers after her second marriage.

Short Cuts

Romaine lettuce may be served with any dressing desired, but the rich flavor of this type of lettuce is brought out most delicately when served with vinegar alone. A combination of oil and vinegar also may be used.

Try a combination of greens in a salad to accompany the meat course. Shredded lettuce mixed with watercress is attractive both to the eye and palate. The same applies to a combination of shredded lettuce mixed with chicory or escarole. Serve with French dressing, mayonnaise or oil and vinegar.

"I have a silk blouse which has become yellow. How can I bleach it white again?" writes E. H. Make a bleach, using one part of peroxide to about fifteen parts of water, and to this solution add a drop or two of ammonia. The same treatment may be given white cotton goods which have turned yellow.

By adding a little flour to the grease in which eggs are being fried, you will keep them from popping and scattering grease all over.

SHIRLEY LIKES SPINACH

This is the way I and my Mommy

fixes it for me like this cut stems off and use only leaves,
cook six minutes, use
very little water,
mostly cook in juice
only, cut up fine,
add butter and salt.

Good little girls eat spinach and Shirley Temple proves she's a good little girl by writing down in her own handwriting her favorite recipe for cooking this delectable dish.

You and Your Child

CHILD REACTS ACCORDING TO PARENT'S MIND

By JANE HERBERT GOWARD

DURING the course of play, three-year-old Walter stumbled. His aunt who sat reading in the same room, looked up to see what had happened and heard him say: "Look where you're going, dear." It was belated advice, but very good advice none the less. Walter picked himself up and went about his business cheerfully. Aunty says that she may be mistaken, but that it seemed to her that he moved about a little more slowly and carefully afer this.

Another mother reports that she has seen her little girl put away her toys neatly, and believing herself to be alone, tell herself with a look and smile of satisfaction: "That's a darling, little girl!"

The other day I observed a boy riding on his tricycle. He fell and the tricycle overturned beside him. His mother who was talking with a neighbor, looked around to see where he was. Seeing him sitting on the ground and rubbing his knee, she excused herself and ran to him. Before reaching him, she called out to let him know that she was coming. "Poor darling! You hurt yourself!" The boy looked up startled and then burst into tears. In less than a second he had made up his mind that he really was hurt badly. He would not have thought of it by himself, in this instance, because he did not seem disposed to cry until mother suggested the idea.

MRS. GOWARD

The list of examples citing the suggestible tendencies of young children could go on endlessly, each case proving that the child responds precisely as his parents prompt him to. If more parents understood this, they could do more with their children.

Children are at once dependent upon our example and highly imitative. A mother who always anticipates trouble, inspires timidity and fear, not courage. And how can a child possibly develop common-sense, the courage to see and do things right, if his mother does not give him sound advice from the time he is a tiny tot? We ourselves must try not to be childish in dealing with children.

Pineapple Meringue

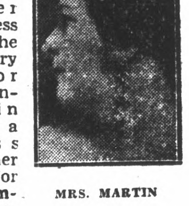
Mix together one cup granulated sugar, four tablespoons cornstarch, the juice and grated rind of two lemons and three cups of unsweetened pineapple juice. Add a pinch of salt and cook in a double boiler until thick and clear. Cool and pour slowly over the slightly beaten yolks of four eggs. Return to the fire and cook until the mixture is quite thick. Pour into a baked pie shell and heap with a meringue made from the egg whites and powdered sugar.

MODERN WOMEN

By MARIAN MAYS MARTIN

It's All Right to Outlaw Vanity Perhaps, But Women Don't Seem Natural Without It

RIDICULE is the cruelest of all weapons. None of us likes to be laughed at. Acting on this premise, a talented young woman, Minna Citron by name, has painted a series of pictures ridiculing the vanities and follies of her sex. My guess is that she won't be very popular, nor will her canvases win much of a success among her own sex, for she has impaled womankind with some vicious pencil thrusts. Why? Not because she is sour on life, but because she has the urge to hold the mirror up to women in the hope that it may help them to know themselves, and, we infer, to improve.



MRS. MARTIN

She believes woman is in conflict, for she's been preoccupied too many generations with the small things, and now that the world is opening to her, her mind doesn't mature rapidly enough to permit her to seize it and bend it to her will.

There is sound reasoning there. Women who have been housebound and whose interests have been petty find themselves lacking in what it takes to make for general understanding of world events. Their minds are groping, but have not absorbed the light.

"IF YOU want to lose me," said a modern husband to his wife, "just turn domestic, that's all. Why women with brains and ability want to clutter up their minds with trivialities is beyond me." All men may not agree with him, but he made sense to himself, which is all any of us can hope for.

Women can be, and are, a force today. Mrs. Citron is right. If we shed our besetting sins and applied ourselves to the questions of the day we might not be deserving of ridicule.

"I used the beauty parlor and the cold cream and lotion counter motif because there are those silly women everlastingly hoping against hope that beauty will be theirs. Women are such children; I want to see them adult," she said in a recent interview.

Yet even an adult is entitled to his or her vanities. It's part of the game to look one's best. A woman without vanity — if you can imagine such a thing — would be lacking in one of her most essential ingredients—spice and everything nice, but not enough sugar.

MEN are vain, too. I have just been reading of a man's perfume bar opened at a smart shop so that the lords of creation may sample the lotions, creams, brilliantines, and what have you that are used in the up-to-date bathrooms of the well-turned-out male. It seems there are scads of such things attractively bottled and packaged, and sweet scented with such odors as men approve.

Which reminds me that it seems men are lots more clothes-conscious than they used to be. They even admit they take a personal interest in their clothes and are not the product of some tailor who attends to all that sort of thing—an attitude men used to assume.

Once upon a time I was asked to interview Bob Hilliard, at that time considered the best-dressed man on the stage. He was thoroughly indignant over the idea that he had such a reputation, and was willing to talk of everything else but clothes, his attitude being that, like Topsy, they just growed. This was a different point of view from Caruso's, who talked to me glibly about, not only his stage costumes, but his personal wardrobe, in which he took considerable interest.

Why shouldn't men admit they like and appreciate the best and the latest in clothes? Doesn't apparel make the man? There is nothing ridiculous in personal vanity, unless it is carried to extremes.

Have You a Question?

Mrs. Martin will be glad to answer in this column questions of general interest. Mrs. Martin cannot reply individually to every correspondent. Names will not be published. Address her care of this paper.

Like Soft Straws?

One or two of the pretty hats of stitched linen or soft straw with brims should be nice for summer. Avoid stiff, straight-across lines. A soft-brimmed hat that can be draped low on one side and up on the other, showing your hair, will make your face more slender.

27,000 UNION WORKERS OUT IN BIG STRIKE

SEATTLE, May 11.—UP—Whirring saws of the Pacific northwest [illegible] its mills in the heart of half of the standing timber in the United States were still today silenced by an ominous, paralyzing strike of 27,000 workers demanding higher wages and shorter hours.

Hope of early settlement fluttered out the window when authoritative sources indicated that employes of the Great Long-Bell and Weyerhaeuser lumber companies at Longview, Wash., will vote down a compromise agreement today between mill operators and union officials.

Thus, additional thousands of workers will join the peaceful strike Monday and close down Oregon's and Washington's greatest industrial payroll. Only the Coos Bay and Willamette Valley mills in Oregon will be open, with indications that the strike will envelope those areas in a week.

One report from Longview said the agreement provided an increase of five cents an hour, a 35-hour week and a closed shop. Another report said it was a five-cent increase, 40-hour week as at present union recognition, but not closed shop, and time and a half for overtime, Sunday or holiday work.

HUEY LONG IN ATTACK UPON MR. ROOSEVELT

WASHINGTON, May 11.—UP—In an address bristling with criticism of President Roosevelt, Senator Huey P. Long, Democrat, Louisiana, tonight called upon the nation to deluge the Capitol with telegrams demanding enactment of the $2,000,000,000 Patman bonus bill, over an expected presidential veto.

The Louisiana Kingfish spent most of the day seeking radio time and finally obtained a period at 10 P. M. over an NBC network. His speech was made public hours before he delivered it.

Long urged the bonus seekers to concentrate their telegrams on the Senate and ignore Mr. Roosevelt because "we hear the President is being urged to turn a deaf ear to the people's plea; therefore, wire your senators."

He mentioned Mr. Roosevelt's term as assistant secretary of the navy during the World war and added:

"Now the President tells us that he was a veteran of the World War, too, and that he understands it somewhat better than we may think. Well, it is true that Mr. Roosevelt was a veteran of the World War. He was assistant secretary of the navy. He stayed up here on Pennsylvania avenue in the daytime, and in a very fine home during the night time, and he drew $10,000 a year for his services.

"He was 3,000 miles away from gunfire."

President Roosevelt was at a fishing lodge in the Western Maryland hills, surrounded by Administration leaders, scanning the details of his New Deal program and pondering the Patman bill, which he virtually has promised to veto at once.

Senate veteran leaders meantime were jubilant over appointment of Dennis Chavez, Democrat, New Mex., to succeed the late Senator Bronson N. Cutting, Republican, New Mexico, in the belief that he would bring them another vote to override Mr. Roosevelt.

Automatic Appeal In Hanging Sought

LOS ANGELES, May 11.—UP—A special State senate committee, investigating the "blunder hanging" of Rush Griffin, young Negro bandit-slayer, today favored a proposal that all death sentences carry an automatic appeal to the state supreme court.

The committee also approved a suggestion by several witnesses that death warrants be withheld by the supreme court until the appeal is decided. The warrant wsould not be delivered to the warden's office until the court issued an order affirming finality of the judgment.

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Friends of Donald Richberg say he is complaining of poor health. Inasmuch as his term as NRA board chairman expires June 16, this may be Donald's wily way of setting the stage for his exodus from the New Deal. . . . Extract from a letter received by the FERA: "For four years I have been slaving in a laundry trying to make bare ends meet." . . . The U. S. supreme court has fixed June 3 for adjournment. Before recessing the court will decide the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium act and the Schechter "sick chicken" case. . . . The Democratic National Committee maintains a close check on political speeches over the radio and all attacks of any consequence on the Administration are promptly answered. Mississippi's "The Man" Bilbo is getting back to normal. When he first came to the senate he abandoned his favorite flaming red neckties and huge diamond-studded horse-shoe stick-pin. But with the coming of spring Bilbo is seen sporting them proudly about the Capital.

GREAT LOSS

The tragic death of Senator Bronson Cutting was a body blow to the cause of liberalism in a way generally unrealized. It was not only that he was one of its ablest and most uncompromising leaders; he was also one of its chief financial mainstays. A millionaire, he contributed frequently and generously to liberal activities and publications—a fact known only to a few. . . . Jim Farley's vast private sanctum in the Post Office Department building has lost its flashy note. The one-time garish, bright-green carpet and furniture have been replaced with furnishings of quiet, brownish-red. Senator Bill Borah is receiving unexpected support in his demand for the ouster of National Republican Chairman Henry Fletcher. Former Senators David A. Reed and Walter E. Edge have been agitating behind the scenes for the replacement of Fletcher. They are mentioning no choice as a successor, but it is an open secret among Edge's friends that he would like to have the job. His chances of getting it are not promising. . . . The standing committee of the Senate Press Gallery has filed a formal protest with Senator Royal S. Copeland, chairman of the commerce committee, charging that M. C. Parson, Jr., one of the clerks, refused newspapermen copies of bills while giving them to lobbyists.

DINNER GUEST

Patrick J. Hurley, former Old Guard Republican Secretary of War, was a recent dinner guest at the White House. . . . Michigan's Representative George Dondero is the proud possessor of the famous Lincoln "whisker letter," which eleven-year-old Grace Bedell wrote to Lincoln in 1860 saying: "If you will let your whiskers grow you would look a great deal better for your face is so thin. All the ladies like whiskers and they would tease their husbands to vote for you and then you would be president." . . . In the office of the superintendent of the Naval Observatory, supreme U. S. authority on the question of time, two clocks the other day disagreed by nearly three minutes. . . . When Ohio's hog-specialist Charley Truax rose in the House and launched into an attack upon the U. S. Chamber of Commerce he began, "During the past few weeks there has grown in the minds of some of we Democrats." . . . Kindly editing by official reporters changed the "we" to "us" in next morning's Congressional Record. . . . The doubling of the size of the CCC under the $4,000,000,000 work-relief program will be a boon to the lumber industry. Of the funds allotted to the CCC at least $30,000,000 will be expended for the purchase of lumber.

HAWAII TO BE ATTACKED BY ENEMY PLANES

HONOLULU, T. H., May 11.—UP—Hawaii which is under a state of war as far as the United States navy is concerned, tonight learned that next week the entire civilian population will be drawn into a mock realism on a massive scale.

It became known reliably that the army and navy will combine to stage a huge night air raid on Honolulu.

PLANES IN BATTLE

Several hundred service planes, including those from naval aircraft carriers, will raid the city, it was said. It was expected that street lights will be extinguished and that citizens will be asked to extinguish all illumination.

During the raid, according to the plan, the coast artillery and island defense forces will train scores of anti-craft searchlights and the latest-type of anti-aircraft guns on the invading air armada.

TO BOMB CITY

The myriad of navy planes hypothetically will attempt to bomb the city and destroy the powerful Oahu fortifications.

Naval and army officers were secretive. They refused to give the definite date of the raid and it was said that military plans to sound a sudden radio warning to all civilians in an effort to simulate the speed at which a real wartime warning would come.

WOMEN SAID HOLDING OUT FOR MURDER

teur playwright's taut nerves were evident as he paced steadily about his county jail cell.

He has been awaiting the verdict of seven men and five women since Friday afternoon, when the jury retired.

SECOND TRIAL

Two years ago a similar jury climaxed a sensational, bitter trial by finding Lamson guilty of murder.

Protestingly, Lamson was led away to "death row" at San Quentin prison. He stayed there nearly a year while his attorneys carried their battle to the state supreme court.

GRANTED NEW TRIAL

The supreme court ruled that Superior Judge R. R. Syer had erred in barring certain phases of the defense case, held that evidence submitted had been insufficient to warrant conviction and ordered a new trial.

The state contended that Allene Thorpe Lamson was bludgeoned to death by her husband because he resented her marital coolness and because he was enthralled in a romance with Sara Kelley, blonde, Sacramento divorcee.

LEAD PIPE

To support this theory, the state exhibited lead pipe found in a smouldering bonfire Lamson was attending the morning his wife was found dead. On it, state experts purported to find blood stains. Similar stains were found on Lamson's clothing and in parts of the campus cottage, the state said.

Defense strategy was built upon the theory that Mrs. Lamson slipped in her bathtub on the Memorial Day morning of 1933 when she was found dead; that she struck her head and spurting blood covered bathroom walls. Lamson said he attempted to lift her, which accounted for the stains on his clothing.

MANY EXPERTS

Both sides paraded dozens of "expert" witnesses to pile up a mass of circumstantial pro and con evidence that mounted to more than 500,000 words.

The second trial was fought bitterly, dragging through 12 weeks. Much technical evidence was introduced, with an occasional dramatic highlight to break the monotony.

DEFENSE'S CASE

The defense reached a peak when it introduced a cardboard replica of the Lamson bathroom—built before the jury box.

Mrs. Kelley was produced as a defense witness to deny an infatuation existed between her and Lamson. She said they exchanged poetry, merely on a "business basis" as Lamson was an official of the Stanford Press and she was a contributor.

Dolores Sorenson, attractive maid for Allene and David before the former's death, denied state allegation the couple frequently quarreled.

During the time between the two trials, Mrs. Jenny Lamson, the defendant's mother, was killed in an automobile accident as she rode to the San Jose jail to visit her son. She had been caring for Allene, the small daughter of the fated couple.
